Agreement

GENERAL Naguib's states-manlike act in reaching an agreement with Britain over the future of the Sudan confirms earlier hopes that the appearance of his regime would result in closer Anglo-Egyptian understanding and the eventual settlement of problems which have plagued the interests of both countries for so long. The Sudaneso, agreement is for Britain the reward of patient endenvour over a very long period and in the face of considerable obstruction on the part of successive Egyptian governments. The unilateral abrogation of the Condominion by Nahas Pasha and his proclamation of former King Farouk as King of the Sudan were actions calculated to render the problem of the Sudan insoluble. It remains to the credit of the British Government, however, that despite set-backs, no wavering been the objective of making the Sudanese united nation under their own administration. Naguib, his "strong man" handling of political extremists in Egypt, and his determination to succeed in a mission which his predecessors had repudiated, has made possible the agreement which he and the British Ambassador signed in Cairo last week. His action also encourages strong hopes that other outstanding Anglo-Egyptian problems can now be satisfactorily resolved. The complicated question of the Canal Zone appears to be next on the agenda for discussions between Cairo and London, and so much goodwill has been created by the Sudanese settlement that it is reasonably certain an agreement will be achieved, though probably not without hard bargaining on both sides. It does appear, however, that General Naguib possesses respect for Britain's position, in the same way___that __the_British. Crashes: Many Bodies Picked

New Orleans, Feb. 15.

An American helicopter and a cutter today picked up mangled bodies floating on the stormtossed surface of the Gulf of Mexico, after a National Airlines DC-6 airliner had plunged to disaster in a thunderstorm with 100-mile-an-hour

Forty-one passengers and five crew were on the plane when it crashed yesterday afternoon on a flight from Tampa, Florida, to New Orleans.

Coastguard officials here said the cutter, Blackthorn, and the helicopter began picking up bodies as they floated to the surface from the wreckage, some 60 miles south-east of Mobile, Alabama. By midafternoon, the Blackthorn recovered eight bodies.

Planes To Friendly Powers

London, Feb. 15. British military aircraft are now available for export in sufficient number and variety to enable friendly foreign powers to re-equip their entire air forces with modern planes.

The Government has approved plans for exporting military planes to many countries, in America, Europe, the Middle East, and Asia. But priority will be given to Britain's own air force and to NATO and Commonwealth countries.

There may, however, be some restriction on the export of certain types of equipment, such as radar and armaments.
Since 1950, British military alreraft exports have been on a reduced scale, because of large home demand, but manufacturers believe that production has been increased to the point where overseas requirements can now be met. Foreign air forces have been walting for the opportunity, and orders are growing.

These exports are regarded as an additional safeguard for Britain's own security, not only because they strengthen her allies, but also because production is at full capacity.

The types available for export include some of the latest designs now going into service with the Carlovich had become a legend for his daring and reliability which had won him the nickname of "King of the Smugglers of Human Beings."

His fees varied according to a legent to the second second to the second to circumstances but, considering the risks involved, they were termed reasonable.

People trying to rescue their friends or relatives from Yugo-slavin, got in touch in Triesto with one of Carlovich's representatives and put down, say, £100 and gave an undertaking to pay another £200 as soon as the operation was completed. The rest was left to Carlovich, who had a vast organisation in Yugoslavia, and who; despite the danger, "delivered the goods' with regularity.

During the last and most dangerous lap Carlovich escorted the fugitives personally. In cases where he could not carry out his mission he always refunded the deposit.

FIRST 100 YEARS Criticism And OF PHOTOGRAPHY Slander In The

The camera was still a daring modern invention in 1853 when a group of men met on January 20 of that year in a house in John Adam Street, London, to found the world's first photographic club, later to achieve fame as the Royal Photographic Society of Great Britain, which, for the next 100 years, waged and won its struggle for the recognition of photography as a serious branch of both art and science and became the "father" of 650 photographic clubs in Great Britain and many more

The Frenchman's process, too, produced a positive, not negative, so that copies could swelled the ranks of amateur not be made.

The Society spent two years persuading Fox-Talbot to relax for amateurs his patent of the calotype - the only known method of producing negatives -so that members could make their own photographs. Soon ofterwards they were alded by the invention of the Collodion or wet-plate process, and, 1880, of the dry-plate on which modern photography depends. During its recent centenary celebrations historians of the Royal Photographic Society were able to point to annunbroken record which make !! the oldest existing photograph society in the world, with activitles dating from the time when primitive photographs were being taken of stdnes in its wake.

In the first place it can be used too easily to expicit personal antagonisms, and it easily degenerates into mallelous slander. In fact, slander is a widespread evil in the Soviet Union. Shkiryatov, Chairman of the Central Control Commission of the Soviet Communist Party. revealed this in his speech at the 19th Congress in October, 1952.

He deplored the existence of people who, "under the guise of criticism, think up false accurations, write about non-existent facts and invent all kinds of nonsense, absurd rumours and completely unfounded accusations...people who from private motives of self-interest try maliciously to defame and slander honest folk."

Moreover, the details of such such as gardening. "criticism," and its perversion, leads to a new form of red tape. Every petty case of slander, it appears, sets in motion cumbersome bureaucratle machinery.

Shkiryatov, for example, told ber named Baranov. The newspaper Pravds (Ukrainy in May 1952, reported that the manageress of a canteen in Kherson had brought unsubstantiated

TREMENDOUS BATTLE London, Feb. 14.

After a tremendous battle between the forwards in the heavy Twickenham mud, Royal Navy and Royal Air Force shared the honours in the first of this season's Services Rugby Union tournament matches, each side scoring one try (three points). Generally, the Navy, inspired by their captain, D. B. Vaughan, were more aggressive, but their forwards seemed looth to release the ball whenever James. the hooker, gained possession. Mexico Expected To Be Buyer Of Textile Machinery

Mexico City, Feb. 15.

The British Chamber of Commerce reports prospects are bright for Mexico to open its doors to new foreign textile machinery.

The report, published in the Chamber's monthly Bulletin, was addressed primarily to British machinery builders. But it is sure to interest both U. S. manufacturers, who have supplied most of the new machinery in recent years, and Japan, which is making a drive for this market.

INTELLIGENCE TEST Call the prices (in shillings) Then k + 1 + a + p = 23 Now p = a + k |1| and (p + k) = (a + 2) From (1) and (2), s = 2k Whence p = 5k So 6k + f = 22, i.e., 5s + f = 23 But s is greater than £ and is an even number. Hence s = 6: f = 4. A fork costs 48 London Express Service.

Effects Children

UNESCO Survey

Paris, Feb. 16. A survey of television in Britain, the United States and Franco shows it has affected children's work, but has resulted in both children and adult televiewers reading fewer books.

The survey issued yesterday by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (UNESCO) dealt with the future of television in the classroom and its educational value among all age groups.

It revealed conflicting appreciations of television which varied from an American educator's ."as dangerous to culture as the atom bomb is to civilisation" to a grateful parent's comment: "Television keeps Billy off the streets. It's a built-in baby sitter."

It also quoted the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr Geoffrey Fisher, who described TV as "nothing less than a perfect disaster. It drives another wedge between the teacher and the pupil."

The survey revealed that in Britain there were 1,500,000 recelvers and in France, the only country which had developed regular educational Television (TV) programmes, there were only 50,000. In the United States which had 109 television stations, there were 17,000,000 receivers.

FAMILIES UNITED

The survey said the claim that TV brought families closer together was true in the sense that they spent more time in each other's company,

It said television had brought to the youngest people an awareness of the outside world which newspapers, movies and radio had first brought to older age groups. Five and six year-olds watched TV longer than older people.

bedtime is often a serious problem."

It said the subjects most suitable for Television were social studies -- (including - government history and geography), music, current events, English literature and art-in that order.

On teenagers, television kept the 16 to 19 year-olds at home

The survey said that in Britain TV had lessened visits to the movies by 40 per cent in the afternoon and one-third at night. A study in the New York metropolitan area showed 49 percent of book readers said they had not read books since they bought a television receiver. ---Reuter.

From The Files

The New Year Holidays at Canton have passed with unusual quiet; the only remarkable incident connected with them being the capture of a Chinese Jack Shepherd, in whom our Indian and English contemporaries may perhaps detect a rebol. rebel or spy of rebels,

A month ago he took a house of considerable size in the 12th ward of the City, where he lived in such luxury, and made such a display of wealth, as excited the attention of the neighbours, which might have been agreeable to the stranger, but that it was accompanied with suspicions as to his character, which brought the police to him; and the whole household having been captured and taken to prison, upwards of $20,000 was found on the premises. While the authorities were engaged in trying to ascertain how the money had been come by, some of the prisoners, not choosing to walt the result of such inquiries, contrived to effect their escape through the roof of the prison, in the sight of many of the townsfolk; who were too much amused with the scene to mar it by capturing the fugitives, and this some of our Indian brethren will probably regard as a very suspicious circum-

THE WONG AREE CASE

In our last issue, we id before our readers an account of a case of oppression and "squeeze." In which the informer Wong Akee, allas Matsow Wong, figured conspicuously; but it appears there was a slight mistake in saying he had received $30, the sum actually paid to him being $20, with a promise however of $10 more; and as this latter sum was not forthcoming, (the poor girl, named Akew, having had .. to borrow the $20 at an interest of only 10 per cent per month,) he stopped her one day in the street, and told her that unless she paid it forthwith, he would "carry her off to Chintan-tsoy, (the village on the 'Kouloong shore,) und cut her into little pieces."

The girl, in a state of great perturbation, applied The survey commented: "But | European for advice, and he directed a note to be written to Ma-tsow Wong, to the effect, that unless the $20 was instantly repaid, a summons would be taken out against him. To this Ma-tsow -World Toturned a verbal reply by the coolic, that if Akew would meet him in a certain house, in Tal-ping-chan, he avould pay

A SECOND NOTE

It would have been preposterous for the girl to have trusted herself in his company, so another note was written to him; and the answer thereto proving anything but satisfactory, a summons was applied for and obtained for the Potty Sessions on last, when, after a lengthy investigation, in which a considerable amount of perjury was proved against the defendant's witnesses, Mr Hillier gave judgment in, the Plaintiff's favour for the $20, with interest and costs; and us, in consequence, of the threats held. out by Ma-tsow Wong to Akow, she considered her life in the matter on being represented to the Chief Magistrate, he bound the Defendant over to tkeep tho pence under bonds for, $800 --himself in $400, and another in a like amount. But having since declared that he will not be balked of his revenger for eight thousand dollars, we trust the police will keep their eyes upon him.
